

Facial Recognition Access

1. Introduction

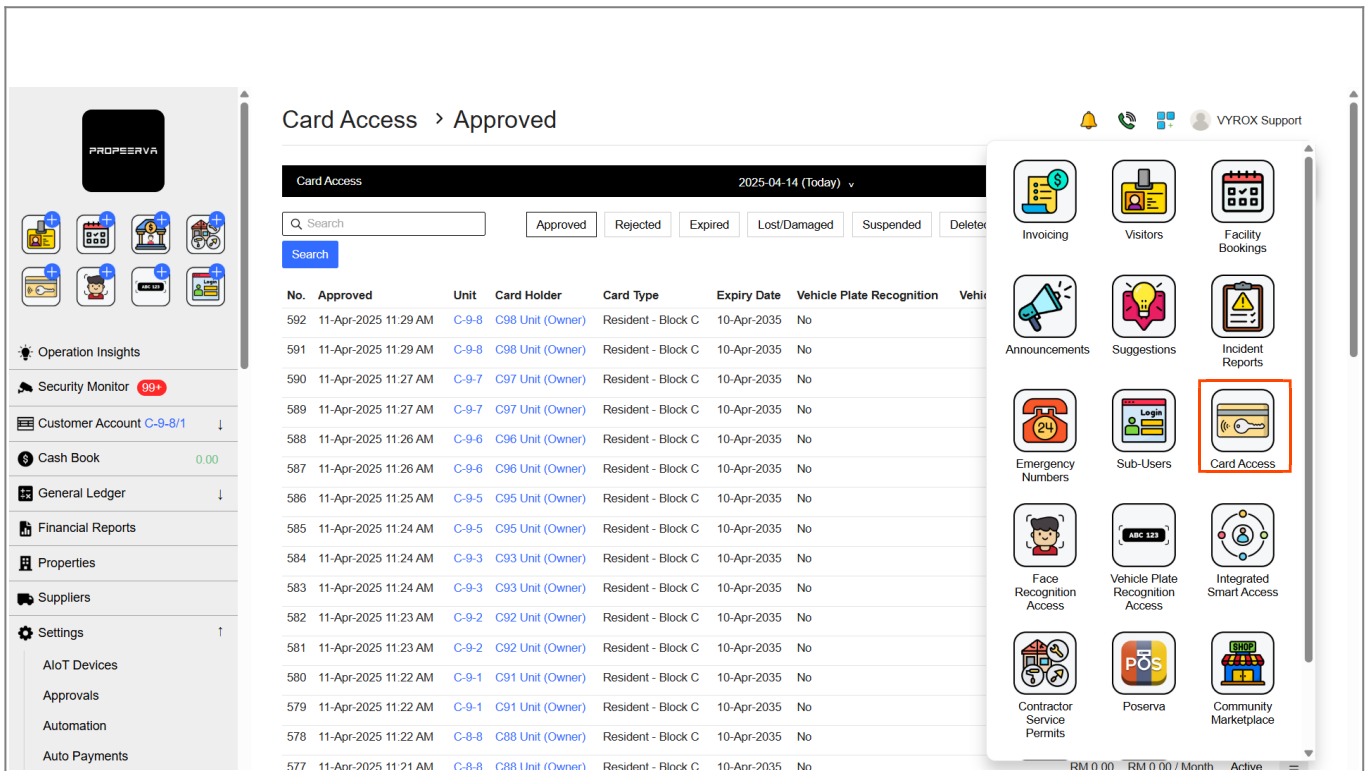

This guide outlines a detailed process for using facial recognition in a manual user system to enhance security, streamline identity verification, and control access. It explains how biometric algorithms capture and match facial features to stored data, ensuring only authorized access. Users will learn key operational steps, hardware needs, and safety considerations for effective system use..

2. Card Access

Residents and approved workers can use a card for condominium entry to get into the building or certain areas. You can use these card accesses instead of keys or fobs, making things easier, safer, and easier to monitor. Card access systems can limit access to lifts, parking lots, and other restricted areas, granting entry only to those who have received approval. Many places use security methods like tracking records and limiting entry based on time.
